1888

清光緒14年

臺灣巡撫劉銘傳將原設舖遞改為驛站郵政，發行軍公機關使用的「臺灣郵票」及供商民郵件貼用的「郵政商票」，在臺灣開辦新式郵政。劉銘傳當時並向英國訂製一批龍馬郵票，但印妥後並未正式投入郵用。1891年年底，臺北基隆段鐵路通車後，此批龍馬郵票被改為火車票使用。

Taiwan Governor Liu Ming-chuan changed the postal system from the Pudi system used for government officials to a courier relay post system. He issued "Taiwan Stamps" for use by military and government bodies, and used a "Commercial Postage Stamp" for mail sent by businesses and the public, bringing Taiwan into a new postal-service era. Liu ordered a supply of Dragon and Horse Stamps from Britain, but after being printed these were never formally put into postal use. At the end of 1891 the Taipei-Keelung railway section was opened, and this batch of stamps was instead put to use as railway tickets.

大清國家郵政局成立，當時幣制由紋銀改為洋銀，郵政局票可用，乃將海關試辦郵政時期印製的小龍郵票、慈禧郵票紅色印花稅票加蓋洋銀面值以應急需。同年10月1日起，向面值蟠龍郵票陸續投入使用。

The Great Qing Post was established, and the national currency was changed (from taels) to nickel silver ("foreign silver dollars"). In the early period of the Great Qing Post, stamps with face values in nickel silver were available, so to meet the urgent needs of the customs service when in charge of postal affairs were used, including the Empress Dowager's Birthday Commemorative Issue, and Red Revenue stamps printed by the British and overprinted with their values in foreign silver dollars. Starting on October 1, 1897, Dragon stamps that had been entrusted to British and Japanese companies to print in nickel silver, were introduced in succession.

On January 1 in the first year of the Republican era (1911), the Republic of China was founded. The Father of the Nation, Sun Yat-sen, was appointed the provisional president. The name of the postal service was formally changed from "Great Qing Post" to "Chungghwa Post." In the early Republican period, with the official name of the country changed, the postal service used the extant London inventory of Coiling Dragon stamps, overprinted them with the postmark "Temporary Neutrality," "Republic of China Temporary Neutrality," and using the Song Dynasty Kai-script calligraphy style, "Republic of China".
